In recent few years, Stellenbosch University has noted an increasing number of students with neurodevelopmental conditions such as Attention-Deficit/Hyperactivity Disorder, Neurodiverse students as well as students experiencing seizures. As staff, we are challenged with responding appropriately in the classroom and in our working environments.

In the spirit of fostering greater inclusivity in respect of students and staff with a range of medical conditions, this session will empower participants with techniques to respond compassionately. We'll receive specialist advice from EpilepsySA on appropriate responses to colleagues and students experiencing seizures at work or in class.

Faith Xintolo is a dedicated social worker with experience in youth development, disability advocacy, facilitation and psychosocial support. She has worked with organizations such as Yabonga Children's Project, Students For A Better Future, and currently works at Epilepsy South Africa Western Cape Branch.
